This is an example view of the homepage. Here is where the user would be directed after logging in. This would most likely be comprised of the most recent posts to the platform, organized chronologically. The user can click my account in the top right to go to their account page and view their most recent posts, as well as their metrics. They can click on Popular Posts to see the most popular posts based on the number of nices!, or they can click daily theme to see the theme for the day and the posts related to it. Finally, they can click Post! to make a post.

This is where users will create and post. Individuals will check off if they want to send the post to the 'Daily Theme', 'Postqueue', or both. If the user selects 'Share', but has over the character limit, it will notify the user and not share the post until it is revised. If the user selects 'Share' and is under the character limit, it will share the post to where the user checked above. If the user selects 'Cancel', it will redirect the user to the previous page they were on.
